

Government Relations

North Carolina

Andrew Heath is a partner with the firm who has served in numerous leadership roles in the state of North Carolina over the past decade. As former state budget director on the North Carolina Governor's senior leadership team, chairman of the North Carolina Industrial Commission, secretary for the council of state, and North Carolina Supreme Court chief justice's director of the administrative office of the courts, Heath uses his first-hand experience and inside knowledge to navigate through the highest levels of state government.

George Teague is a partner who has focused on lobbying at the North Carolina General Assembly and offices of the executive branch of state government for over 40 years. He also handles administrative and regulatory matters before state government agencies, including the North Carolina Department of Insurance. George is well-known and highly respected in the halls of state government and has been ranked in the Top 50 Most Influential Lobbyists by the North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research.