

Congressional Oversight Investigations

Guiding clients through perilous, high-profile congressional probes

Our experienced team can help you

- provide fast-response legal insights and personalized advice to CEOs and other executives who have been requested to testify before congressional committees
- anticipate lines of questioning based on our in-depth knowledge of political strategies on both sides of the aisle
- craft written testimony and concise, substantive answers to anticipated questions
- conduct rapid-fire question-and-answer prep sessions to simulate the tension of “being in the room” during questioning
- confer with members of Congress and oversight committee staff to gain insights into their goals for the inquiry
- potentially eliminate any need for a public hearing by proactively providing client information that is most relevant to the inquiry

when you need help and the stakes are high.

Our full-service team stands by you from start to finish.

A bipartisan team of former members of Congress combine forces with our Firm’s veteran litigators and government relations professionals to prepare clients for the rigors and pitfalls of congressional oversight investigations and state-level inquiries. Our team is well regarded by many corporate CEOs and executives who have relied on our guidance to prepare for high-pressure hearings on Capitol Hill.

Experienced interdisciplinary team spans legal and political realms

Our team members have served in Congress, and our litigators have represented companies in bet-the-company situations. This means that you receive holistic support that accounts for both the political and legal risks you face. The team includes:

- Former Democratic ranking member of the House Energy and Commerce Oversight Committee, who understands the machinery of Capitol Hill and was formerly a veteran television anchor and investigative reporter who understands the reputational risks of government and press inquiries
- Political strategist who has served in leadership positions on winning presidential campaigns on three continents and has spent decades advising on government, political, and corporate public policy issues to mitigate political risk
- Recognized litigator with more than two decades of experience as lead counsel in complex federal white-collar crime investigations and jury trials
- Leading litigator for healthcare litigation and healthcare fraud and abuse and civil false claims act investigations
